Dungeonite is an American computer-animated fantasy action-adventure television series created by Bart Bodine, and produced by Aardman Animations, Universal Studios, and Reel FX for Nickelodeon in February 2010. The series features the adventure and comedy of a young boy's quest to reclaim his dog, who has been kidnapped by the Fables. It aired on Nickelodeon from February 2010 to October 2011. Plot Curtis Crane, voiced by Sherman Grace, is a young man from San Francisco. One day, while out for a walk, he comes across a man digging up bones in the woods. The man explains that he is clearing the woods of the bodies of what he calls "Fables." The man claims he is the keeper of the fables, the fairy folk. They stand up and challenge him. The show focuses on the exploits of three boys — Zukk, Barry and Connor, who are camping in Zukk's backyard. Zukk (A.K.A. Zuko) is voiced by Curtis Armstrong and Barry is voiced by Jackson McLaren. Barry asks if people are even called Fables now as the man has his answers. The keeper is revealed to be the Woodsman, also known as Jack. He traps the boys in a tree and leaves them to gnaw on the branch until it breaks. Zuko manages to pass the Woodsman through some additional traps. Zuko then arrives home to find his dog, Dubs, lying on the step, missing. Zuko is then turned away by his mother as she calls him names for not helping Zuko with his problems. Zuko finally gets a job from his dad. Zuko then visits Dubs at the Tree of Bones to find out that Dubs was taken by Jack. The boys manage to survive the Tree of Bones but are suddenly transported to a mountain filled with caves and rock monsters called the Creepers. Eventually they find a cave and everyone in the cave is someone from their childhood—except the Woodsman, who answers only by whistling. There is a magical maiden in the cave, who has lost the ability to speak. They show themselves to be intelligent and helpful. They later find a hidden entrance to their home, and Zuko sees his memories at the campfire. The boys learn that the Fables were enchanted, and were awake as long as they had their enchanted clothes. Everything was stolen from them, the cloth, and
