The Torqued Up Legends game play combines real world physics with the popular arcade mechanics. Torqued Up Legends have 20 different tracks set in realistic terrain. The tracks take place on varying terrains in real life; forest, desert, beach, highway, snowy mountains, even the ocean. The tracks have various terrains to keep things varied, but the game is designed for use with Wii Remotes and even PC as well as standard Wii gamepads or joypads. The game engine is designed in such a way that players can use their own controllers or even PC as their gamepad. We've also included 3 different game modes; Individual, Team, and multiplayer versus. In Team the racing drivers are racing each other on a team for points and for bragging rights. The individual mode lets you race a single event in single player for a specific amount of time. Multiplayer is competitive racing on many different tracks with many different opponents. It is designed to be a realistic driving game, but with an arcade style driver progression system. Players are ranked by score and the leaderboard system shows the top 15 players who contributed to that score. Finally, we have multiplayer versus. Here is where the nitro boosting kicks in. Players and racers are facing each other, off of each other. Players can crash into each other; spin each other out; ram each other; block each other's boosts. It is an intense real world game of Extreme Motor Sport Racing, in a controlled and safe environment. Players can use nitro to catch up to a racer or as a weapon. If you get caught with nitro you will blow up! We want to create a game that is much more than just another racer. We want to create a fun game that will keep you entertained for hours. We already have a large library of car upgrades, cosmetic upgrades, tracks, and game modes. We are trying to build upon this base and continue to create more content. Want to voice your opinion? Deluxe Back in 2013, while I was taking summer vacation, I made the ill-fated move to LA in search of a job as a screenwriter. Within 72 hours I was on the train from Boston to Hollywood, slamming food into my face and griping to my family that there are no fruits you can purchase from the sushi stand on the train. The funny story that day was that I slept on one of my family's couches and was awakened the next morning by my mother screaming, "HEY! You've GOT to see this guy's room!" I wondered what was so special about her reaction, but hadn't a chance to ask before I received a text message from my dad who was staying with my family: "AND THE BUTTON FROM THE BOOT COMES UP JUMPERS AND SUMMER BOWLS FOR THE SEXY ASSHOLE WHO CRIED LIKE A CHILD AND WOOPED BECAUSE TOOK A LONG TOW TO GET HERE." My family was right. That night changed the trajectory of my life. I found the keys to a smartphone, 60 M's to my name, and a new friend. For the next six days, my soulmate and I would feed each other cupcakes and cheap sushi at my first job, write 10 page screenplays with underwear on the floor, and develop comedy series. It didn't have anything to do with my trying to get a job as a screenwriter (I didn't get one) or the boxes of clothes and empty pizza boxes I found in the closet of the studio I stayed in. It had everything to do with the amount of money I had saved up. When they opened my trusty backpack I found a bounty worth more than $1,000. Taken individually, each $20 bill was sturdy and institutional. When they piled together, they formed a motorcycle. Hell, I could ride that motorcycle right out of my PJs and ride it into Clutteron Colosseum! Inside my backpack was, among other things, two $100 bills and a $50. Suddenly, I was in business. After I filled my pockets with $250 and packed it into a nice gray wallet, I carried on, getting more and more rational as the clock was ticking. It's only when I was exiting my apartment building that I realized it was my face that I

Wreckfest is the game that spawned a genre. It is the pinnacle of crazy, colorful, fun, and explosive off-road racing. When the dust settles, the only thing that matters is who has the most bruises and the most points. Wreckfest racing simulates a free-roaming configuration: as a driver, you are free to accelerate where you please and brake with style. You'll be racing four different vehicle classes: VW Beetle, Beetle GT and the new Porsche 935 Cayman R, Porsche 718 Boxster S and Porsche 911. Each car has three unique rally stages that change with each weather and time of day. In addition, you'll be racing three disciplines: two-wheeled, four-wheeled and bumpers (bumper cars). If that's not enough for you, there are also two new brands of cars: Buggy and Wingman. Both are true off-road and open-class racing - the small, nimble Buggy is perfect for figure 8s, the big, heavy Wingman for a pure rally experience. Race through different competitions around the world, take on the season, and win the championship. Wreckfest has a total of 40 tracks. Don't just think, race! The competition is tough. Brand new cars, new tracks, new challenges. All this and more awaits you when you Wreckfest! The difference between Mac OS X and Linux is the operating system. Linux is an open source operating system, while Mac OS X is a proprietary (i.e. closed source) operating system. Here are a few key differences between the two: These advantages are primarily meant for PC users, who use either Mac or Linux OS on a PC. 1
