Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an electronic apparatus and an operation control method, and particularly relates to an electronic apparatus and an operation control method for controlling a remaining battery charge amount thereof. 2. Description of the Related Art In recent years, as devices are getting smaller and thinner, needs for lower power consumption are increasing and a battery, which is used as a power supply, is required to have the property capable of giving a longer life. Therefore, for a battery pack in which a plurality of battery cells are connected in series, there has been suggested a technique for managing the remaining capacity of each battery cell in a memory (see, for example, Japanese Patent Application Publication No. 2008-195669). However, it takes time for the remaining capacity of each battery cell to be initialized, and when the remaining capacity of a certain battery cell is initialized while the remaining capacity of another battery cell is yet to be initialized, it takes more time to finish the initialization. For this reason, even when the remaining capacity of one battery cell is still large, when a different battery cell is in a terminal not initialized, the remaining capacity of the battery cell becomes zero. As a result, there is a possibility that the remaining capacity becomes less than the originally calculated and an erroneous calculation may be generated. As described above, the conventional technique is not capable of avoiding an erroneous calculation of the

My email address is: tjr3b@ccr.uncs.vu.nl I'm a final year undergraduate computer science student. I've had an interest in programming for a long time and have written a few small programs and do some fairly simple things with C++, but I'd like to have a better grip on programming in general. I'm looking for (or willing to learn) anything I think will help me develop my skills. The kind of things I'm looking at right now are: -An introduction to computer programming from beginning to end -Java learning, either as an entirely new language, or how to use Java for a different purpose -Prototyping in Matlab or something else -How to write a simple compiler. This seems like a long way to go to me, but I'm not afraid of a little work. I'm willing to get my hands dirty (although I don't expect an answer from someone in half a year, I don't have any deadline or anything). I know it's a big step to get an undergraduate computer science student to put their head above the parapet and start doing something. So I'm not looking for an idiot and I'm pretty sure that someone can help me get started. If anyone is interested they can email me at the address above.Regional expression of 11 beta-hydroxysteroid dehydrogenase type 1 in the brain. The enzyme 11 beta-hydroxy
