The Janus Party, the Social-Democrats (Greens), the Free Democrats and one Moravian member have objected to the Committee's proceedings. The Chairman of the Committee, the Hon. The Minister of Defence had invited a vice-chief of the Polish army, Lt. but he declined. Before the war broke out, the most urgent problem faced by the Polish military leaders was the organisation of a corps for special missions behind the Russian front. They agreed that a temporary corps of anarchists should be set up, the organisation of which would be entrusted to Okhrana. The corps, conceived as an autonomous anarchist unit under the command of the anarchist Haler, was to be supplied by the government in advance with the necessary weapons, ammunition, uniforms, etc. cocina del anarquista pdf The official army newspaper, "Bøhren," provided frequent articles about the Army and the trade unions. Although the Army was strictly independent of the government, its tacit support for the ministry was often manifested during the popular disturbances that were provoked in the early 1900's. In the first weeks of 1917, the Bolshevik party announced that it would fight for the seizure of power. Various alternatives were seriously considered, such as the establishment of a united front by all workers, and the creation of an independent workers' army. The main opponent of this plan was the Constitutional democratic movement of the Mensheviks and SR's, headed by Volin, Kerensky and Milukov. The Bolsheviks argued that a power struggle in Russia was inevitable. They argued that a compromise was essential, until the workers could take power by force. A new Cabinet was formed on 15 January 1917, in the aftermath of the Petrograd uprising. On 20 January, the Provisional Government accepted the resignation of two ministers and one deputy. In the summer and fall of 1917, the Bolsheviks grew increasingly confident of their ability to secure support from the masses, and of their increased strength within the Bolshevik movement. Æœœn our country an anarchist would not be a criminal; on the contrary, he would be an element of the defence force.Æœ" Excerpt from a speech in 1965 by the Governor of Polish Silesia, who was in charge of police affairs in the province. The flat was illuminated by a number of candles, the first of which was found in the kitchen. A chair covered with a white tablecloth had been set up
