Sorry Kids love a good tie-in story, and the topic-driven people behind popular card game Magic: The Gathering are no exception. The developer at the forefront of that project, Morningstar Games, has developed a board game based on the rules for Magic: The Gathering, and it's ready to be published to retailers. Developed by Morningstar Games using the trademarked Magic: The Gathering cards, Pathfinder: Magic: The Gathering features characters from the Pathfinder Worldbook, and comes with two board games -- one for two to five players and another for six to ten players. At $30 USD per set, Pathfinder: Magic will be available from retailers such as Amazon and GameStop. The set offers two factions to play against -- the mage cult of Aldag, led by Ravenloft, and an acolytes faction of Orzhov, led by Heroclix. The game uses turn-based combat with initiative, and has a variety of heroes, each with their own unique set of abilities. With Magic: The Gathering, the goal is to link spells together and "cast," ultimately using them to attack the opposing faction. The game's narrative is tied to another popular fantasy roleplaying game, the Pathfinder campaign setting, but Morningstar Games is also open to adding in new story elements from other systems if that's what a publisher or player group wants. "We've worked hard to ensure that the game will be both compelling and visually pleasing," said Allan Hewgill, GM of Morningstar Games in an official FAQ. "We've incorporated several mechanics that readers and game players
